Sub : Over - dependence on selective employees for official work regarding.

On the basis of examination of some vigilance cases reported to this Dte. General, it has been observed that some CEO/DEOs adopt administrative practices in their offices which lead to over- dependence on one or two selective subordinate officials to the exclusion of other employees. This results in concentration of administrative power and is very often the cause of serious malpractices which can breed corruption and hinder fair and transparent decision making. Invariably such practices generate resentment among public and other employees and are also cause of large number of complaints compared to a system where administrative power is exercised in diffused manner. Accordingly, it is requested to sensitize all field officers under your jurisdiction to desist from over-dependence on one or two employee.
